Welcome to Whitefish, Montana!

Our conference will be held in Whitefish, a small mountain town in western Montana. We will be filling up Grouse Mountain Lodge, which is only 24 miles from beautiful Glacier National Park. The population of Whitefish was 6,357 at the 2010 census and the altitude is 3,028. Whitefish is located on the western side of the continental divide.

The city was developed in 1904 when the Great Northern Railway was built. Also prominent was the logging business (at one point Whitefish was known as Stumptown when the area was being cleared for the train station) and in the late 1940’s the completion of their first ski resort built on Big Mountain spurred the start of the tourist industry in this spectacular mountain town.

Within one mile of Grouse Mountain Lodge, Whitefish is full of quaint curio, antique, jewelry, and art shops, plus a myriad of choices for fine dining. Whitefish Mountain Resort, which is a sister company to Grouse Mountain Lodge, has various outdoor activities available as well. While the skiing season will be over, there is hiking, biking and golfing all nearby the lodge (weather permitting).

You may never want to leave Grouse Mountain Lodge, which boasts these amenities:

- Floor to ceiling windowed lobby highlighted by a river rock fireplace and inviting seating
- Logan’s Bar and Grill features Montana Cuisine, unique menu specials, local micro-brews and signature drinks
- Deck and patio offers outdoor dining on the 18th fairway of the Whitefish Lake Golf Course
- Espresso Bar in the Lobby serves Montana Coffee Traders coffee and Tea Forté teas
- Indoor pool, dry sauna and two outdoor, year-round hot tubs
- Outdoor fire-pit with seating
- Free wireless high-speed internet access throughout the property
- Grouse Nest Gift Shop for sundries, clothing and souvenirs
- Business Center and self-serve laundry facilities
- Fitness center, tennis courts and soccer fields
- Remedies Day Spa
- Complimentary Shuttle Service to downtown Whitefish, the Amtrak Station (WFH), Whitefish Mountain Resort (winter only), and the Glacier Park International Airport (FCA)

8:00 AM – 2:30 PM Pre-Institute 1: Adventure Montana: An Outdoor Educational Experience Enhancing Our Leadership Skills 3 CEUs

$50 Additional Fee (includes lunch and transportation)

Anita Graham, MSW, LCSW
WVU Healthcare Children’s Hospital
Morgantown, WV

Maggie Warner, BSN, RN, Wilderness First Responder Certified
Kettering Health Network
Dayton, OH

Participants will venture outside of the typical classroom setting, embracing the beauty of Montana while focusing on the enhancement of innovative leadership skills. Leadership can be defined in a variety of ways depending upon the given set of circumstances, the people involved, and the setting. It is the action of giving guidance, directions, or having influence upon the situation, individual or group. The outdoor educational experience enhances an individual’s ability to make real decisions about real things. It forces people to work together to achieve goals. In outdoor leadership, cause and effect go hand in hand, ultimately determining the overall outcome and success of the journey. Successful leadership is dependent upon decision making, communication and other critical skills. Leadership skills acquired through an outdoor educational experience are similar to those we use in our clinical or other work experiences as we lead our patients, colleagues and others towards success of our overall day to day mission. The outdoor educational experience offers tactile learning with peers in a fun, interactive way while developing and honing real life leadership skills.

Destination: Glacier National Park, Avalanche Lake Trail. Round trip approximately 5 miles. Trail is steep in some areas with a 700 foot elevation. Hiking boots, hiking socks, hat, gloves and layered clothing recommended. Not recommended for people with major medical health concerns. Limited to first 25 paid registrants who select to attend by April 15, 2015. Meet in hotel lobby for 8:00 am departure.

3:00 PM – 5:30 PM Pre-Institute 2: Circles of Hope: Group Work in Pediatric Oncology Social Work Practice 2.5 CEUs

Nancy F. Cincotta, MSW, MPhil
Camp Sunshine at Sebago Lake
Casco, ME

The value of group work in the pediatric oncology community is well understood by those who have had the opportunity to run effective programs. Groups can provide support, information, and enhance self-esteem and mitigate against an existential sense of loneliness enabling parents, and participants of all ages to cope more comfortably with their child’s diagnosis of cancer, their own experience as a parent of a child with cancer, or that of a sibling. The work that can be done in the group, among group members, is different than the work that can be achieved within the context of a more private professional relationship. Group work in the pediatric oncology arena is a dynamic process, which falls within the domain of social work practice. This process can be a threatening intervention for the practitioner who has no past experience with the modality and no mentorship regarding the process. Social Workers running groups, as well as those interested in running groups would be encouraged to attend.
7:30 PM – 8:30 PM Early Registration and Meet and Greet Gathering

Alistair Robertson, MSW
Valley Children’s Hospital
Madera, CA

This session is designed for social workers new to the field of pediatric oncology. Advance Practice Seminar 2A: Leadership in Mentoring and Supervision

Fran Greeson, LCSW
Beverly Bagwell, LCSW
St. Jude Children’s Research Hospital
Memphis, TN

Whether you are new to supervising students or you consider yourself a seasoned supervisor of both students and employees, there are challenges for the supervisor at every level of experience. Some of these challenges can include confronting ethical distress for those you supervise, managing appropriate boundaries, promoting a healthy work/life balance, and disciplining a staff member who was once your peer. As leaders in our field, it is imperative that we mentor and train the next generation of pediatric oncology social workers using evidence based strategies. This session will review the theoretical components of clinical and administrative supervision and discuss how they uniquely apply to the practice of pediatric oncology social work. Participants will have the opportunity to discuss challenging supervisory situations involving both students and staff and to learn from each other’s collective experience.

10:00 AM – 12:00 PM 2 CEUs

Advance Practice Seminar 2B: Professional Identity Exploration Using Photovoice

Under the broad theme of “Pediatric Oncology Social Workers, Who are we?” the participants will discuss our professional identities from different angles through subgroup discussion, photo-sharing and narratives. As an outcome, we will altogether compile our collective thoughts of who we are with visual images and succinct narratives.

Requirement: Please bring photos that you think are relevant to the topics on professional identities as pediatric oncology social workers.

Amy Grose, MSW, LICSW*
Catherine MacLean, BA
Dana-Farber Cancer Institute
Boston, MA

*Indicates Presenter

This unique workshop will share reflections on young adult survivorship from both patient (video clips, artwork and writing) and clinician (in person) perspectives. This presentation examines the implementation of a social work research project on distress screening through the lens of novice researchers. The process of creating a framework for social work research in an academic medical institution provided many learning opportunities. Discussion topics include reviewing basic research procedure, navigating the IRB process, seeking grant funding, identifying key stakeholders, leading an interdisciplinary research team, developing strategies for overcoming obstacles and enhancing visibility for social workers as leaders in research.

Social workers will learn practical methods to cultivate rapport with families from diverse cultures in order to improve communication, to better meet the needs of the family and to enhance outcomes of patient care. This opportunity will provide information about an assessment tool that can enhance productivity and increase cultural awareness among your chronic and acutely ill populations. As a result, multidisciplinary teams will have a broader knowledge base and understanding of the populations they serve.

3:00 PM – 5:00 PM POSTER PRESENTATION 2 CEUs

P-1 Creating Our Identity in a Changing Healthcare Setting

Christie Smith, LCSW
Jennifer St. Clair, LCSW
Duke University Medical Center
Durham, NC

As changes in healthcare continue, Social Workers must recognize and identify steps as well as the tools needed to distinguish our role from those of other health care providers. Health reform will bring forth patients with higher needs necessitating an increase in social workers who are competent and whose worth has been recognized as effective. We need to be intentional and mindful about the unique skills needed to solidify our position in this climate of change.
P-2 Self-Identity after Cancer among Young Adult Childhood Cancer Survivors in Korea

Jaehee Yi, PhD, MSW
Anikka Hoidal, MSW Candidate
University of Utah, College of Social Work
Salt Lake City, UT

This study examines four cancer identities adopted by Korean childhood cancer survivors; associations between cancer identity and participation in cancer-related activities; and between cancer identity and sociodemographic, medical variables, and stigma. Understanding survivors’ identities and involvement in cancer-related activities helps clinicians develop programs and policies for this population.

P-3 Into the Lion’s Den: Returning to Work with Chronically Ill Children After Baby

Stephanie Freeman, LICSW, Ed.M., OSW-C
Rachel Rogovin, LICSW, OSW-C
Hasbro Children’s Hospital
Providence, RI

While the challenges of returning to work after having a baby are well documented, little research exists about the specific issues that clinical social workers encounter during this transition. In this predominately female profession, there is opportunity to evaluate the needs of post-partum workers and develop appropriate interventions to support their return to work. Given the emotional intensity of pediatric oncology social work, more research is needed on the specific impact that this work has on new moms.

P-4 Advancing Best Care for Diamond Blackfan Anemia: the ABC’s of DBA

Nancy Barbach, MSW, LCSW-R
Cohen Children’s Medical Center of New York
New Hyde Park, NY

This poster will provide accurate information regarding the unique features of Diamond Blackfan Anemia and the implications for social work practice in the psychosocial care of patients and families with this rare, inherited bone marrow failure syndrome.

P-5 Get a Little PEP in your Step: A Model for Improving Psychosocial Care Delivery in Pediatric Oncology

Stephanie Freeman, LICSW, Ed.M., OSW-C
Rachel Rogovin, LICSW, OSW-C
Hasbro Children’s Hospital
Providence, RI

Providing high-quality psychosocial care for cancer patients and families is an integral component of high-quality medical care. A lecture series was developed by clinical social work highlighting important psychosocial topics. Post-test evaluations concluded that team members felt an increased understanding of the psychosocial needs of pediatric oncology families and an improved ability to work more collaboratively. Going forward, clinical social work will continue to provide formalized psychosocial education to the multidisciplinary team.

5:00 PM – 6:30 PM Reception – Hors d’oeuvres, Entertainment, Raffle and Door Prizes (must be present to win)

There will be tasty appetizers starting at 5:00 PM with a formal welcome to Whitefish and conference announcements. Beverages will be available for purchase.

2B A Social Work Perspective: Exploring Changing Dynamics and Leading Psychosocial Care With The Introduction of Legalized Marijuana in Colorado

Kara Walsh, MSW, LCSW
Children’s Hospital Colorado
Aurora, CO

Access to marijuana in Colorado has been widely publicized, due to new legislation legalizing recreational sales along with already existing legalization of medicinal marijuana. Anecdotal observations in a pediatric Neuro-oncology setting illustrated by a case study show that there are new dynamics in caring for these patients. This breakout will cover an overview of legislation; include hypotheses as to the cause of new dynamics in care, and recommendations moving forward to address the observed unintended consequences of these changes.

2C Does It Matter? Looking at Gender Differences in Coping and Distress for Parents of Long Term Survivors

Wade Iwata, LMSW, OSW-C
Stacia Wagner, LSW

Zoe Arzt, MSW, LSW*
Jeneane Sullivan, MSN, CPON*
Lindsay Harms, BA, CCLS*
Lamia Barakat, PhD
The Children’s Hospital of Philadelphia
Philadelphia, PA

*Indicates Presenter

In the whirlwind of a new cancer diagnosis, a family’s psychosocial needs are often the last aspect to be addressed. With an understanding that the emotional needs of patients and families are as important as treating the medical condition, a multidisciplinary team developed an innovative Patient Family Education program that is efficient, standardized and comprehensive. This presentation will outline the process and importance of incorporating the psychosocial team into new diagnosis home management education for caregivers.
3B The Mindful Social Worker: Incorporating Mindfulness Practices into Pediatric Oncology Social Work

Lisl M. Schweers, MSW, LCSW
Jennifer I. Reyes, MSW
Children’s Hospital Los Angeles
Los Angeles, CA

Mindfulness based interventions (MBI) can alleviate stress, depression, anxiety, and other psychological symptoms frequently present when children are treated for cancer or other life threatening medical conditions. MBI can include mindfulness meditation; mindfulness based cognitive therapy, guided imagery, and progressive muscle relaxation. This presentation will provide an overview of several key mindfulness practices that can be incorporated into social work practice and will also include an opportunity to participate in a brief mindfulness meditation activity.

3C Developing and Sustaining a Family Advisory Committee in Pediatric Oncology: Social Workers as Leaders in Advancing Family Centered Care

Elyse Levin-Russman, LICSW, OSW-C
Massachusetts General Hospital
Boston, MA

A family centered approach to care is seen as the optimal partnership between health care providers, patients and families. Social workers are natural leaders with their abilities to be both facilitators and advocates of the family’s voice. This session will review the development and work of a Family Advisory Committee in Pediatric Oncology initiated in 2003 by the Clinical Social Worker. A review of its successes, challenges and families’ reflections will be addressed.

3D From Patient to Student: Interventions & Reintegration

Esther Sachse, LCSW-BACS, CT
Whitney Craig, LMSW
Cancer Services
Baton Rouge, LA

The educational needs of children diagnosed with cancer are often set aside as medical professionals provide life-saving treatments that disrupt the educational lives of children. Although some treatment facilities provide in-house educational resources, few programs exist to provide educational services to help bridge the gap from cancer treatment to academic success in schools. The program described in this presentation improves communication between parents, schools, and educational professionals, ensuring successful reintegration of childhood cancer survivors.

Using a Problem-Solving Model to Navigate Ethical Dilemmas with Children, Adolescents and Young Adults

Robert P. Butters, PhD, LCSW
University of Utah, College of Social Work
Salt Lake City, UT

Working with children, adolescents and young adults in health care settings requires special attention to ethical practice and the continual reappraisal of conflicting priorities and the needs of our patients. Social workers who function as part of a multidisciplinary team have special obligations to ensure that children’s, adolescents’, young adults’ and parents’ rights are protected and that their needs receive consideration within applicable standards of care. This session will review common ethical dilemmas and present a framework to approach ethical and value-based decision making from an empowerment approach. Case studies and real world examples will be used to illustrate the potential pitfalls and demonstrate the process of arriving at client-centered ethical practice.

Bryn Dunham, MSW, LCSW

The clinical assessment usually reveals a multi-dimensional and complicated situation. This presentation will explore the medical, ethical, cultural, religious, emotional, and legal dilemmas. The social worker’s role will be examined in how to maintain a therapeutic relationship with the family while advocating for the rights of the child and supporting the healthcare team.

Finding opportunities to present our research or program development work to our peers is an important aspect of knowledge dissemination as well as promoting professional development. Social workers are contributing to a wide body of knowledge within the field of pediatric psychosocial oncology. One expressed barrier in presenting is lack of confidence in meeting the requirements of a poster or oral presentation which typically begins with constructing a brief, concise abstract from which your submission may be accepted or rejected. This session will focus on the critical elements of abstract writing, along with an opportunity for collaboration around individuals’ concepts and plans for potential future abstract submissions.

12:00 PM – 1:15 PM COMMITTEE MEETINGS 1 CEU

Box Lunch Provided for Registered Attendees

There are three committees that meet each year at the annual conference to provide members with the opportunity to become more involved in APOSW and provide guidance in matters that are of interest in supporting our clinical roles within pediatric and AYA oncology populations, as well as the mission of APOSW itself.

C-1 COMMUNICATION AND SOCIAL MEDIA COMMITTEE

Rachel Rogovin, LICSW, OSW-C
Chair – Communication and Social Media Committee
Hasbro Children’s Hospital
Providence, RI

Networking and communication between members is a core benefit of APOSW membership. The APOSW website and quarterly Newsletter are invaluable tools used by members to communicate new information, resources, and happenings. We invite participation from members to expand APOSW’s online presence and explore new avenues for the APOSW membership to communicate and network through the use of technology. We are seeking interested and motivated APOSW members to participate on the Communication and Social Media Committee and help move APOSW into 2015 and beyond!

C-2 RESEARCH AND PUBLICATION COMMITTEE

Jaehee Yi, PhD, MSW
Chair – Research and Publication Committee
University of Utah, College of Social Work
Salt Lake City, UT

The purpose of the meeting is for members to share research they are participating in and to discuss ideas that they would like to develop into research, publication, or group projects. The Research and Publication Committee also plans to develop an APOSW research project where members can collaborate, learn and develop their skills together. This Committee meeting is not intended for “research experts” or those currently participating in research only, it is open to all members. It is a great venue to meet your potential mentors, mentees, and like-minded colleagues.
The Quality of Life (QOL) Committee is open to all members. This Committee defines an agenda and serves to guide the work done by the SIWG’s. This year’s agenda will focus on Professional Identity and Leadership in Pediatric Oncology Social Work. Through the group’s dialogue, we will identify challenges in clinical practice and develop innovative solutions to both enhance our role in the treatment team and in turn promote excellence in our care of patients and their families.
